BUZZ

Walk my dog around the city more. When I walk Harry, I walked and walked and walked with him through the Village and sometimes as far as Battery Park City. When I'm a bit lazy, if I walk Harry more, perhaps that will tie in with my resolution — to exercise and lose weight.
 — Isaac Mizrahi, fashion designer

I will be making a lot of surprise drop-in visits to The Alley Extension. I love to see the surprised look on the students' faces.
 — Judith Jamison, artistic director of Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater

Consciously have ever-greater appreciation for the basics of life that I sometimes tend to take for granted.
 — Michael Feinstein, "Feinstein's at the Regency"

A New York state of mind in 2010

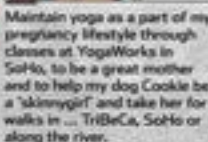

Buzz-worthy New Yorkers gave us their New York City-related resolutions for the new year — from visiting the ballet and opera more often to inking religiously on the city's rooftops. For more resolutions, head to amny.com. —compiled by Julie Corbin and Emily Widone

Get NYC kids excited about being active and playing sports again.

— David Barton, founder of DavidBartonGym

Maintain yoga as a part of my pregnancy lifestyle through classes at YogaWorks in SoHo, to be a great mother and to help my dog Cookie be a "skinnygirl" and take her for walks in ... TriBeCa, SoHo or along the river.

— Bethwey Frankel, star of "The Real Housewives of New York City" and author of "The Skinnygirl Diet"

Go to A&T and The Met ... a few times. I need to broaden my horizons.

— Adam Duritz, lead singer of Counting Crows

Put the great restaurants of New York City to better personal use. I resolve to force-feed myself at least twice week — preferably from Halal street stands or the many Fresco Tortilla taco shops. Last year I totally slacked off on my calorie intake. This year, I'm going to eat a lot.

— Andrew W.K., singer

I always get made fun of for my old-school planner that I carry with me everywhere around New York. I have random pages folded and papers flying out, so I plan on becoming more organized.

What an animal: Tiger can't keep hands to self
 Tiger Woods and his alleged mistress, Rachel Uchitel, didn't seem to keep a low profile last weekend. The two reportedly held hands during a 300-person party at a private mansion in Palm Beach, Fla., "Entertainment Tonight" reported.

Source: 'No chemistry' caused Taylor/Taylor split
 Aw ... we actually liked this couple. Singer Taylor Swift, 20, and "Twilight" hunk Taylor Lautner, 17, reportedly had broken up after three months of dating because they are "better as friends" and they lacked "chemistry," a source told Us Weekly.

'Hangover' star joining cast of Broadway show?
 "Hangover" actor Justin Bartha is joining the cast of Broadway's "Lend Me a Tenor" when it opens in April, according to Variety. A representative for the Stanley Tucci-directed show wouldn't comment.

'NCIS' actor doesn't chide out after haircut
 We love hearing about generous celebs ... almost as much as we love hearing about their ones. "NCIS" star Michael Weatherly was "extremely" kind in the tps department after a recent haircut at Blow Downtown, a source told us.
