The Eagle has landed

By RAAKHEE MIRCHANDANI and DANICA LO

AMERICAN Eagle is so square. Next Thursday, the cargo short and denim haven opens its brand-spankin'-new Times Square flagship location (1551 Broadway; 212-205-7260), complete with a "denim library" stocked with more than 20,000 pairs of jeans and a "bra conservatory" featuring more than 7,000 bras. Haute List has the scoop on Tuesday night's opening party. We hear that Gossip Girl Leighton Meester is providing the entertainment — she's scheduled to sing — and that she'll be performing "Good Girls Go Bad," "Somebody To Love," "Playing Games" and "Your Love's a Drug." Word on the street is that Fall Out Boy's Pete Wentz will deejay. Plus, the first 10 Haute List readers to e-mail nypostgiveaway@shadowpr.com will receive a limited-edition tote bag ($29.50) and the brand's chic sequin cardigan, (pictured at right) (normally $89.50) for free!

■ What time is it? Time for you to get a watch. Here's one that's super-cool, super-cheap and super-street — the limited-edition Timex 80 designed by Brooklyn-based tattoo artist JK5. Get it for $85 at Barneys New York.

$380

■ School tees: Hipster T-shirt magnate Christopher Lee Sauv  — he masterminded the "Save Anna" shirts in honor of Vogue editrix Anna Wintour — has collaborated with Theory for a "Save School" collection to benefit the Fund for Public Schools. All proceeds from sales of the short-sleeve ($20) and long-sleeve ($25) tees go directly to support New York City's public schools. They're sold exclusively at Theory Gansevoort (40 Gansevoort St.; 212-524-6760), Theory Spring Street (151 Spring St.; 212-226-3691) and Theory Columbus (230 Columbus Ave.; 212-362-3676).

■ Cover girl fashion: Check out the new O magazine, with one of the few cover images Oprah's ever shared with another celeb. We love both Oprah and Ellen — and we especially love Oprah's figure-flattering, festive and elegant dress (left). Despite her millions in the bank, the queen of TV talk has got her feet firmly (and fashionably) on the ground. Oprah's Teri Jon knee-length portrait-collar taffeta shirt-dress rings in at a real-world-affordable $380 and is available at Saks Fifth Avenue and Bloomingdale's.

■ Just opened: If an Anglophile met a Japanophile — and had a baby that happened to be a store, it would be called Superdry. Superdry, the British clothing company best known for its Japanese-UK-American mash-up aesthetic — and for gracing David Beckham's buff bod — just opened its first American outpost this week. We love the brand's use of vintage American fabrics and its rough-and-tumble look, plus the prices are super-reasonable — import-wise, that is. Jackets and jeans start at $90, sweaters at $70 and T-shirts at $34. Superdry: 718 Broadway, at Washington Place.

■ Om my goodness: Sarah Jessica Parker, Kyra Sedgwick, Ivanka Trump and Whitney Port have all been spotted at YogaWorks, and now you can om right along with them — for free! Bring this newspaper copy of Haute List to the brand-new YogaWorks Soho (459 Broadway, at Grand Street) and receive a free one-week pass for unlimited yoga classes — they offer more than 90 each week! — at the SoHo location. Check yogaworks.com for more info and class schedules.
